Of course, this ended the matter, as far as the probate court is concerned, and the claim was disatlowed.

He leaves the following children to mourn his death: Marshall Lyle, Mrs. James Dunnington, Geo. M. Lyle, Mrs. John Graham. The funeral was held Sunday at the home.

The NORTHERNER won't vouch for the accuracy of the score—Dr. Hamil-ton kept it, ask him. The Greenhorns own up to defeat by the Suckers last Thursday by a score of 46 to 7. The Suckers claim they won it by at least as large a score as that, and say it would have been 460 to seven if Jay Cumings hadn't got a black eye in the first inning, putting him into the ambulance, where he was attended by I. B. Conner, chief of the hospital nurses. The big tin sucker that the captain of the Suckers carried in the march to the ground, was borne triumphantly back to town, held high in the air on a pole, while the dulcet tones of the big green horn were stilled and the horn trailed large stock to select from. THIRTEEN ARE GRADUATED

FROM THE PAW PAW HIGH SCHOOL-EXERCISES OF THE WEEK

"Between the past and the future." So read the motto which adorned the high archway at the end of the rink Wednesday evening of last week, the occasion of the graduation of the class of '96 from the Paw Paw high school. The letters were in pure white upon a background of pale green—the class colors. A broad stairway, covered with lovely white rugs, led up to the carpeted stage, which was beautified by its surroundings of ferns and evergreen, seats in a semi-circle being reserved in seats in a semi-circle being reserved in the center of the platform for the class, have purchased Thos. Willerton's meat the board of education and the teachers and singers occupying seats at either side, while just in front of the main stage and at one side was the platform for the orchestra. The rink was bril-liantly lighted with arc and incandes-

Led by Supt. Wilson, the class came up the aisle and ascended the platform, to the strains of a march by the Beck-with Theater orchestra. This was at

Rev. F. W. Corbett offered an invocation, after which the orchestra gave descriptive conglomeration by Chas. Lovenberg, "Nigger in the Barnyard," representing life on a southern plantation in slavery times. During its rendition, the barnyard sounds were so realistic as to transport the hearers, in fancy, from the brilliantly illumined rink to some farm or river scene that arose to their memories.

Miss Lena E. Moshier, the first graduate to come to the front of the platform, delivered an excellent essay, "Unseen." The unrest and discontent that causes humanity to continually strive for the unseen and unknown were nicely portrayed, as were also the effect of great men on the affairs of the world, according as their ambitions were selfish or for the good of humanity. Miss Moshier made an excellent impression on the audience, leaving them anxious to hear the balance of the class. Miss F. Mabelle Cumings, in her able oration on "Offsets," cited some well known truths as making plain the law of compensation. Milton lost the price-

but more especially from the sixteenth a great and glorious future for the workers in the line of electrical investigation, as he believes the science to be yet in comparative infancy.

Burt M. McLeod was the class historian. The size of the class prevented his going into details as to the individual excellencies of the class of '96 (although there was material for an excellent paper of that character had time permitted its presentation). He therefore was compelled to confine himself to original generalization, and the history was both unique and interesting.

Mrs. Emma Paige, accompanied by Miss Bernice Quick sang "For all Etern-ity" is so pleasing a manner as to call forth generous applause.

"Into Other Fields" was the title of Miss Ella G. Taylor's essay. The character of the production showed her "mind to be fitted to enter into other fields, where every man has work to do acording to his abilities and opportunities," as she expressed herself in the essay when speaking of the class. "May we be able to go onward, outward and upward," was the substance of one of her prettily rounded sentiments. "Uncut Diamonds" were taken in hand by a capable literary lapidary, Miss Alice M. Bangs, and finished to a brilliant luster. She drew comparison between the rough stone in the sculptor's hands, the garden under the gardener's care, the rock from which the finished diamond is brought by skill, and the human mind under educational influences.

Another descriptive fantasie, "Down the Mississippi," by the orchestra, was so well received by the audience that another selection had to be played to quiet the applause.

Michael C. Dillon gave an excellent oration, "The American Student," calling on the scholars to take a more active part in politics and government as the only chance for improvement in government affairs he believes to be through the university man. His talk was brimful of glowing Americanism. He demanded liberal education cation for young men, and thought every young man, before maturity, should select some avocation in life and then devote his energies to it.

Miss Zella M. Harvey, the class prophetess, concealed the real nature of her oration under the unique caption.

"The Liberty of Thought" Her had carried surreptitiously down to the grounds, expecting to raise it as an emblem of victory, was discovered by the Suckers and confiscated, being transformed to an emblem of Greenhorn disaster. Yes, the game was a marvel of ingenuity—not to say skill—the ingenuity being displayed in devising ways not to match the Greenhorn disaster. 'The Liberty of Thought." Her
